Making Connections

Confused about the concept of supply and demand? Make the connection by completing the activity below!

Directions: Cut out each sentence fragment along the bold lines. Then read each fragment carefully. On another sheet of paper, arrange three fragments to make a complete sentence. Continue until nine sentences have been formed. Then glue the sentences into place. Hint: The first fragment of each sentence begins with a capital letter. The last fragment ends with a period.

A store owner	is greater than the demand,	there would be a surplus of it.
People pay higher prices	his prices too high,	because they are rare.
If the demand for goods or services	for bread	the price goes up.
If the supply of goods or services	sells the prices	he can raise prices.
If a store owner wants	stopped buying bread,	of his merchandise.
If a store owner raises	to increase his profit,	the price would go up.
If people	for diamonds	because there is a large supply of it.
People pay lower prices	became scarce,	the price goes down.
If bread	is greater than the supply,	people might not shop in his store.
