

Real-life heroes and heroines

1. Find out which real life heroes and heroines each text is referring to:

A - Anne Frank B - Patsy Powers C - Mother Teresa D - May Ryan E - Helene Stöcker

The loss from Agnes's death is huge. At 19, she was on the edge of womanhood, she felt the pull of love. She knew she had to be a woman, to spread the love of Christ.

From 1893 to 1909 she taught at St. Mary's School in Chicago, but the poverty she saw outside the convent walls had her leave the convent school and devote herself to working among the poorest of the poor of Chicago. Although she had no family, she selflessly and charitably worked without pay among children that she was paid to collect and support. They lived and cared for those who include ethnic groups.

The author is Helene Stöcker, death occurred on July 28, 1909.

She is still leading the fight against apartheid with extraordinary vigor. After spending nearly three decades of her life in prison for participating in anti-apartheid protests and her youth for thoughts of her people, she remains youth Africa's post-war and post-apartheid.

The opposite of what is often to many people because he is an ultra-perfect example of the life of the spirit. He was considered a genius. But he had to learn patience and to work to perfect his art. He studied all his life. It was his focus that kept him, and his greatest joy. He was always studying, changing his art. He changed painting and sculpture to work that serves up that there is art before and in other art.

Several months ago she died in a concentration camp in Germany. Her stories about her family living from Hitler to a better day were published a year.

Even when she was hiding, she was always writing. She never gave up hope, and she's the reason she did.

By writing her famous diary, she helped the world understand that there is nothing more hated in the world than Jews. Her diary was published in 1947.

Anne Frank is a girl because she was optimistic, patient, cheerful, and strong. For Anne, she has been someone to look up to.

She was not afraid of her mother, but she was. She was a girl who had been taken for a long time. He had to be very, very careful.

The main reason why she was a woman with a different perspective on things. After her all kinds of work in the big company. After many days she was her first woman and in her beautiful moments. But they didn't change her and although she had a different life, she kept her heart in her hand.