Party organizer: present prizes to the winner of each round as the answers are revealed during the football game. After the game is over, tally up which player had the most correct answers (or whose answers were closest to the game's outcome, as would be in the case of question #10). If there's a tie, settle it by determining which football team had the fewest personal fouls during the game. The player who rooted for that team wins.
If that still doesn't determine a winner, do what the pros do: flip a coin.
