

Rapunzel

There once lived a couple who longed to have a child. .... [5] Their wish came true. .... [6] The wife waited for the child to be born, she sometimes cradled the枕邊的 the pillow next door. [7] She grew some delicious-looking Rapunzel hair, but the garden belonged to a witch, and the witch vowed to get this hair. .... [8] The wife asked that she not notice that her hair. [9] She grew older and older. .... [10] Her husband decided to sneak into the garden after dark and pick some. His wife ate it all, but of only made her eat more. So the husband went back to the garden.

But this time, the witch caught him. "Please show your child, we request!" she demanded. The horrified husband held her off by pulling a string. "Take all the lotion you want, then," said the witch. "But in return you must give me the child." The poor man agreed. .... [11] The child was born, the wife took it away to raise as her own. She called the baby girl Rapunzel.

Rapunzel grew to be as beautiful that the witch decided to use this most rare and rare. So when the child reached the age of twelve, the witch sent her to a tower deep in the forest. The tower was very tall, and had no door. Please Rapunzel had no way of escaping. .... [12] The tower came to stay, she called, "Rapunzel, Rapunzel, let down your hair." .... [13] The girl threw her long braid out the window, and the witch climbed to the top of the tower.

.... [14] A prince happened to be riding through the forest. From a distance he heard Rapunzel singing to please Rapunzel. He immediately drove to the beautiful tower, but since he found the tower, he could find no way in. The prince stood outside thinking about the voice in the tower. .... [15] He could go back to town and every night he would come back to the tower and the girl would sing to him again. .... [16] One day three big boys came to the tower and the girl would sing to them. "Rapunzel, Rapunzel, let down your hair." .... [17] A long braid fell down the window all the way down to the ground. "If that's the case the climb, I'll try it." The young prince thought to himself. .... [18] The witch had given the prince Rapunzel hair well. "Rapunzel, Rapunzel, let down your hair." .... [19] He climbed the long braid to the top. .... [20] Rapunzel was frightened, as she had never before seen a man. But the prince told her how he had been