

Suffixes: -able, -ible

Many words end in -able and -ible. Sometimes it is hard to remember which one to use. The -ible ending is for words that have a Latin origin. The -able ending is used for words that are verbs. Over the years, there have been some words added such as:不可收拾. The -able and -ible suffixes mean capable of and it changes the verb of the words to be an adjective.

Here is a little rule to help you decide the correct spelling. It works most of the time.

- If you remove -ible from a word, you are left with a complete word.

For example:

horrible -> horr + ible. horr is a complete word, which is not a complete word.

horrible -> horr + ible. horr is a complete word, which is not a complete word.

For example:

adaptable -> adapt + able. adapt is a complete word, which is not a complete word.

adaptable -> adapt + able. adapt is a complete word, which is not a complete word. Therefore, adaptable is spelled with -able.
