Eighth Grade Literature by Unit

Text	Publisher	Synopsis	Diversity	Genre	Form
"Tia Chucha" by Luis	Glencoe	The narrator describes his admiration for his	Hispanic		Poem
Rodriguez	(2000)	aunt and her eccentric and whimsical
#TI O: T II NI	Dilense	approach to life. (Metaphor).
"The Story Teller" by	PH 2005	Poet extols the value of storytelling to			poem
Mark Van Dorenq		awaken the reader/listener's imagination.
"The Fifty-First Dragon	Adventures	Gawaine, a young, indifferent knight-in-		Fantasy	Short story
by Heywood Broun	(1989)	training, attends special dragon-slaying courses with his headmaster. When it is time to slay real dragons, the headmaster arms Gawaine with a battle axe and a magic word, and Gawaine slays fifty dragons. However, the headmaster makes the mistake of telling the young knight that the magic word is nothing but a confidence-booster, and, after his encounter with the fifty first dragon, nothing is left of Gawaine but his medals.
		(Theme)
"The Monkey's Paw" by	Adventures	A family is given a magical monkey's paw that		Fantasy	Short Story (1989),	grants its owner three wishes. The family		Suspense
	Ginn (1981)	wishes for money and the next day they are granted the exact sum they wished for as compensation for their son's death on the job.
		The mother wishes for the son to come back home alive and, when he hears knocking at the front door, the father uses his final wish.
		When the mother opens the front door, the street is deserted. (Theme).
"The Rule of Names" by	PH (2005)	On the island of Sattin, the superstitious		Fantasy	Short story Ursula K. LeGuin	()	residents are surprised to find that their resident magician, a fat, incompetent man named Mr. Underhill, is actually the dragon who has been wreaking havoc on the townspeople.			