You can get a Wedding planner checklist free from most wedding related websites and bridal magazines often carry a version in each issue. So search one which you feel suits you best and is in a format with which you can work. A checklist which has a handy budget planner attached is also a bonus.

Nowadays, most of the checklists are generic to the average style of wedding and as such may need to be edited to suit your great wedding. And if you can find one which allows you edit it on your computer through word or excel then use it as it will make your life easier. Your other option is to scan or copy one onto your computer so you can edit it. Read through it very consciously first and then take out anything which does not fit with your wedding plans.

Now most weddings are planned within an 18 month timeframe, however some couples select just 12 months and others will do it in less time than this. This is really like that any free wedding planning checklist will be based on an 18 or 12 month wedding planning period.

So again you will need to adjust these dates to fit with the amount of time you have allocated to plan your wedding in.

Once your checklist is edited and formatted to your liking, print out several copies. Keep one with your wedding planning notes, put one on your notice board if you have one, give one to your groom and one to your maid of honor. Both sets of parents may like to have a copy too so they can keep track of what is happening.

Transfer any key dates onto a calendar so you have a second reference should you need one. It can also be a good idea to keep a copy of the checklist on your computer with the tasks ticked of or scored through; just in case you loose your other copy.

As you progress through your wedding planning is sure to refer to the checklist regularly so you know what is coming up and what needs to be done at that moment in time. As each task is completed tick it off as done. Using your main wedding planning checklist, you can write more detailed task lists on a weekly or daily basis which will include any appointments, paperwork which needs to be done and any shopping you need to conclude.
