

2. Remember the way when the officer suggests using the apartment building for cover. The dialogue on the left is what they say to each other. On the right is what each of them is thinking deeper within. The first thought is what they think, but you can change them if they do not represent what you consider each character to be thinking.

After you have completed them there is the graph, you will, as a group, write out in front of the classroom.

What each character says:

Charlie as officer: I am observing some vehicles to search the apartment.

Max as Max: Oh, all right. Of course. Help. Look, apartment you said. I certainly don't nothing to hide.

Max as officer: There is something suspicious about this apartment with you. Is that correct?

Max as Max: Yes, it is really old now. Yes, he is not here, right now. He has gone to work somewhere to his ... other apartment.

Max as officer: Can we see his house?

Max as Max: Yes, it is his house. I am sure he wouldn't mind if you searched here, too. That's your business of his apartment, right? It's his apartment, but he is not here, right now. He has gone to work somewhere to his ... other apartment.

Max as Max: Of course, yes, yes, yes. I am sure he wouldn't mind if you searched here, too. That's your business of his apartment, right? It's his apartment, but he is not here, right now. He has gone to work somewhere to his ... other apartment.

Charlie as officer: Oh, thank you. I am sure he wouldn't mind if you searched here, too. That's your business of his apartment, right? It's his apartment, but he is not here, right now. He has gone to work somewhere to his ... other apartment.

Max as Max: I am sure he wouldn't mind if you searched here, too. That's your business of his apartment, right? It's his apartment, but he is not here, right now. He has gone to work somewhere to his ... other apartment.

What he is thinking:

I wish I was a better detective. I'm not used to searching this strange man's apartment.

I am sure he wouldn't mind if you searched here, too. That's your business of his apartment, right? It's his apartment, but he is not here, right now. He has gone to work somewhere to his ... other apartment.
