I've seen a big improvement with my students since using your website. The fourth graders have to complete 10 various pages in a weekly packet that is due on Fridays. The parents receive a copy of the answer keys and have to sign each page. It's a great way to keep the parents involved, and parents and students both like the idea of only one homework assignment a week. The boxes really help when learning the long division and multiplication. I call them the training wheels. It is also really helping to prepare for the state test (OAT) coming up in March.

The Math Worksheet Site is one of the most valuable tools available on the Internet. I use it with my own children daily and promote it on my web site, HomeschoolChristian.com. Being able to tailor the worksheets and repeat as necessary with freshly generated sheets make this a virtual replacement for textbooks for most of elementary school. New worksheets are added regularly, including many covering skills that are often glossed over in textbooks, such as Roman numerals, adding and subtracting time by varying amounts of time, and reading a simple tape measure. The low yearly subscription is well worth the additional cost over the free worksheets. One of my top 5 recommendations on the Internet.

I teach adults Numeracy in a college in the North of England. We have to teach 12 students at a time and it is often difficult to get round them all in a session, let alone produce materials tailored to their individual needs. This website is brilliant and allows me to stay sane! I can produce work for everyone in a matter of minutes. It looks very professional, and the fact that answers are supplied too makes all the difference.

As a special education teacher with no text books and three grade levels (not counting the actual grade levels of my students, ranging from K-5) I count on the endless worksheets your site provides. I am so impressed with the very frequent new additions and the "special ed friendly" way a lot of the worksheets are set up, like the new option to include the 5-minute intervals around the clock...AWESOME! Your site is at the top of my list when referring new teachers to very helpful sites on the Internet. Keep up the good work and know that you are very appreciated.
