

Another Aboriginal myth

Read this Aboriginal myth about fire and answer the questions that follow.

The Capture of Fire

Goodlah, a noted magician, captured a piece of lightning as it struck a dead tree during a storm. He imprisoned it as a convenient way to make fire for his own use and ignored demands that he share this wonderful discovery. At last the tribe became so enraged with Goodlah that a group of elders called up a wharfbird just as Goodlah had made a fire with his piece of lightning. The wharfbird picked up the fire and scattered it all over the country, and fire became common property when members of the tribe picked up enough burning wood to make fires for themselves.

To escape the jaws and laughter of the tribe, Goodlah fled to the hills to talk, and to plan revenge.

From Aboriginal Myths by G. and M. J. Watson

How would you describe Goodlah's behaviour?

What does common property mean?

Do you think Goodlah was right to feel angry with the tribe for calling up a wharfbird?
