
APPENDIX 10: THE EUROPEAN UNION

The European Union (EU) is a political and economic union of member states located primarily in Europe. It was established in 1993 by the Maastricht Treaty, which replaced the European Communities (EC) and the European Coal and Steel Community (ECSC). The EU is a supranational entity, meaning that it has its own institutions and legal system, and it exercises authority over its member states in certain areas. The EU's primary goal is to promote economic growth, stability, and cooperation among its member states. It has a single market, a common currency (the Euro), and a common foreign and security policy. The EU also has a judicial system, the European Court of Justice, which interprets EU law and ensures its uniform application across all member states.
