

Present simple	Present progressive
Positive            I work every morning.            You go to school every day.            We always eat "thank you".            They usually play together.            He plays the piano once a day.            She teaches young children.            It cries all the time.	Positive            I am working right now.            You are going to school now.            We are taking him for a walk.            They are getting nervous now.            He is playing the piano this week.            She is fixing her bike at the moment.            It is doing right now.
Negative            I don't work every day.            You don't go to school.            We don't eat fast.            They don't like you.            He doesn't play the piano.            She doesn't teach children.            It doesn't cry.	Negative            I'm not working today.            You aren't going to school.            We're not eating fast.            They aren't playing games.            He isn't playing the piano.            She's not teaching at school.            It isn't crying.
Yes/No questions            Do I work here?            Do you go to school?            Do we eat fast?            Do they like you?            Does he play the piano?            Does she teach children?            Does it cry every time we go?	Yes/No questions            Am I working here?            Are you going to school?            Are we eating fast?            Are they playing games?            Is he playing the piano this week?            Is she teaching children today?            Is it crying now?
Wh- questions            Why do I work here?            When do you go to school?            How do we eat fast?            Why do they like you?            Where does he play the piano?            Who does she teach?            Why does it cry?	Wh- questions            Why am I working here?            When are you going to school?            How are we eating fast?            How are they playing games?            Where is he playing the piano today?            Who is she teaching today?            Why is it crying now?