In today's "Global Community" it is ever more important that human beings, as a species, solve problems that not only affect people in their immediate communities, but also solve those problems which affect the nation as a whole. As Kate Brown, Tom Clancy's book <sup>Red Heat</sup> said "Together we can improve the future in which we live in but divided we shall be destroyed." The most obvious example of the benefits of a united nation solving problems together is China. Similarly philanthropist Bill Gates also believes in solving problems of the United States.
