

I Have a Dream...

Use the audio feature below to give a reading experience similar to reading the original document. Click on the audio feature below, then use the next page to hear the audio.

I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live up to the promises of its creed: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal."

I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia, the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood.

I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, the sweltering with the evil of heat of a state that has been the hotbed of segregation, the hotbed of injustice, the hotbed of hatred, will be transformed into a radiant valley of brotherhood. Let us not be fooled by a man who will be glad to replace the genuine with the counterfeit, the material with the spiritual.

I have a dream that one day every valley shall be exalted, every hill and mountain shall be made low, the rough places will be made smooth, and the rugged and rocky road will be made straight, and the highway of peace shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together.

And I dream that one day, the sons of the North will be joined to the sons of the South, and the sons of the South will be joined to the sons of the North, and the sons of the North and the sons of the South will be joined to the sons of the North and the sons of the South.

And I dream that one day the sons of the North will be joined to the sons of the South, and the sons of the South will be joined to the sons of the North, and the sons of the North and the sons of the South will be joined to the sons of the North and the sons of the South.

And I dream that one day every valley shall be exalted, every hill and mountain shall be made low, the rough places will be made smooth, and the rugged and rocky road will be made straight, and the highway of peace shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together.

When will you dream, my fellow Americans? Will you dream of a day when every valley shall be exalted, every hill and mountain shall be made low, the rough places will be made smooth, and the rugged and rocky road will be made straight, and the highway of peace shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together?