

- Read the passage from the classic 19th-century novel Jane Eyre by Charlotte Brontë. Complete the summation by inserting words from the passage into the blanks. Then determine the focus of the summation and circle the corresponding letter.

"Where the devil is Rochester?" cried Colonel Dent. "I cannot find him in his bed."

"Here! here!" was shouted in return. "Be composed all of you: I'm coming."

And the door at the end of the gallery opened, and Mr. Rochester advanced with a candle: he had just descended from the upper story. One of the ladies ran to him directly; she seized his arm: it was Miss Ingram.

"What awful event has taken place?" said she. "Speak! let us know the worst at once!"
