

Using a Comma to Answer Yes or No

Name: _____

When you answer a question with either a yes or a no, the past tense form of a verb like to do or to be is often included in your answer. Use a comma to separate the yes or the no from the rest of the sentence. Let's focus on answering a question with the past tense form of to do.

| Affirmative(Answer Yes) | Negative(Answer No)                            |
|-----------------------------|----------------------------------------------------|
| Yes, I did.                 | No, I didn't. or No, I did not.             |
| Yes, you did.               | No, you didn't. or No, you did not.         |
| Yes, he did.                | No, he didn't. or No, he did not.           |
| Yes, she did.               | No, she didn't. or No, she did not.         |
| Yes, it did.                | No, it didn't. or No, it did not.           |
| Yes, we did.                | No, we didn't. or No, we did not.           |
| Yes, you all did.           | No, you all didn't. or No, you all did not. |
| Yes, they did.              | No, they didn't. or No, they did not.       |

Read the story about Michelle and Tony's day. Then answer the questions.

An Ordinary Day

Michelle's alarm went off at 6:00 a.m. She groaned and reached her hand out to shut it off. She was not eager to get up. She always felt tired in the early morning. She heard her brother Tony's alarm go off in the other room about ten minutes later as she was choosing what to wear. When she went downstairs at 6:30 a.m., he was already sitting at the kitchen table eating breakfast. She sat down next to him and poured cereal and milk into a bowl. They also each drank a glass of orange juice and ate some bananas and strawberries their mom had cut up in a bowl for them. Their dad pulled their lunch bags out of the refrigerator and handed them to the kids as they put their cereal bowls, glasses, and spoons in the sink. They both put their lunch bags inside their backpacks and checked to make sure they had their homework ready to turn in. Since it was getting warmer, they decided not to wear any jackets. By the time their dad walked to the door jangling his keys, they were ready to leave. He always dropped them off at school on his way to work. All three of them were smiling as they got into their car. For the first time that week, they were going to be on time for school.

- Did Michelle and Tony's mother drive them to school? No, she didn't.
- Did the kids check to see if they had their homework? _____
- Did Michelle's alarm go off before Tony's alarm did? _____
- Did the children's mother make eggs for breakfast? _____
- Did Michelle go downstairs at 6:30 a.m.? _____
- Did Tony start eating breakfast before his sister did? _____
- Did the children's father put their dishes into the sink? _____
- Did the children sometimes arrive at school late? _____
- Did Tony jangle his keys by the door? _____
- Did they all smile when they got into the car on time? _____