

The Battle of Lexington. The next morning, April 19, 1775, British soldiers reached Lexington and were confronted with two companies of patriot militiamen drawn up on the village green. British fired a shot and the militia poured several volleys into the American ranks. The militiamen fled for cover, leaving eight Massachusetts citizen-soldiers dead. This incident marked the beginning of the war.