

The Boston Massacre. The Townshend Acts passed by Parliament in 1767 placed unwelcome financial restrictions on the colonists, creating great ill-will. On March 5, 1770, an unruly, hostile mob confronted a squad of British soldiers stationed in Boston. The soldiers fired into the crowd, killing five Bostonians and wounding others.