

The Science of Fingerprints (1)

Across

- A. evidence often used in the courtroom and used distinctive and unique
- B. the process of developing prints from a surface
- C. bloodstain pattern analysis
- D. sometimes other scientists also study of people's their fingerprints, evidence and
- E. a form of proof of writing before it is written
- F. a supply system with small tubes to take its evidence to法庭

Downs

- A. a set of ideas that are held or thought together because they are often used together
- B. keeping the evidence methods used for finding out about a crime
- C. the science of bloodstains refers to science that helps you learned
- D. to recognize and correctly identify someone or something
- E. to detect some prints usually on metals