

Conjunctions are words that join, or connect, parts of a sentence together. Subordinating conjunctions are used to join independent clauses to make complex sentences.

Directions: Using the lists of subordinating conjunctions, combine the independent clauses to create complex sentences.

after	although	as	as if	as long as	because before	even if	even though	if	once	since
so that	though	til	unless	whenever	whether

1. Perry walked along the hill cautiously. She was afraid she may lose her footing. She feared she would tumble downward.

---

---

2. Kyle placed all of the watercolors back into the paint box. He'd be able to locate them quickly the next time he wanted to paint. He'd be able to start right away.

---

---

3. Sue's softball team, the Dragons, forfeited Saturday's game. Two of their players were sick. They couldn't make it.

---

---

4. The bake sale will not have enough baked goods to sell. We all need to contribute to make it a success. We will make enough money.

---

---

5. I haven't had any pizza for a while. Last time was in Maine. I really don't miss it.

---

---