Winter in the Mountains

Winter in the mountains is very different from winter in the city.
Snow falls heavily, covering the roads, trees, and cabins.
The air feels sharp and cold, and the days are shorter.
People who live in the mountains must prepare carefully for winter.

Before winter arrives, families store food, check their heating systems, and gather firewood. Travel becomes harder because icy roads can be dangerous. Even though winter is challenging, many people enjoy the quiet beauty of the snowy mountains.
