

Name : _____ Date : _____

The Awakening Garden

The long, cold winter is finally over.

The snow has melted away, leaving the ground soft and ready for new life.

Spring has arrived!

In the garden, the sleeping flowers are beginning to wake up.

Tiny green shoots are poking through the brown soil.

Pretty yellow daffodils and purple crocuses stretch their petals toward the warm sun.

Bees start to buzz from flower to flower, looking for sweet nectar.

High up in the trees, birds are busy building nests.

They carry twigs and dried grass in their beaks to make cozy homes for their babies.

Everything in nature feels busy and new. Spring is a wonderful time to watch the world come back to life.

1. What happens to the snow when spring arrives?

2. Which two flowers are mentioned as "waking up" in the garden?

3. Why are the bees buzzing from flower to flower?

4. What are the birds doing high up in the trees?

5. Based on the passage, how would you describe the feeling of spring?
