

Name : _____ Date : _____

What is Tax Day?

Tax Day in the United States is usually on April 15. It is the deadline for people to file their income taxes with the government.

Taxes are money that people pay to help the country run.

This money is used for things like schools, roads, hospitals, and public services.

The idea of taxes has been around for thousands of years.

In early civilizations, people paid taxes in the form of goods like crops or animals.

In the United States, income tax became official in 1913 after the 16th Amendment to the Constitution was passed.

Before that, the government collected money through tariffs and other taxes.

Today, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is responsible for collecting taxes and making sure people follow tax laws.

Tax Day can sometimes be moved if it falls on a weekend or holiday.

Even though many people find taxes stressful, they are important for supporting public services and the economy.

Comprehension Questions

Answer the questions below:

When is Tax Day usually held?

Answer: _____

What are taxes used for?

Answer: _____

How did people pay taxes in early civilizations?

Answer: _____

When did income tax become official in the U.S.?

Answer: _____