A Perfect Fall Day

Every fall, the Johnson family spends a Saturday at a local farm. The weather is cool, and colorful leaves cover the ground. They begin their visit by walking through a large pumpkin patch to find the perfect pumpkin. Some pumpkins are small, while others are so big that two people can barely lift them.

Next, the family explores a corn maze. They laugh as they try to find the right path through the tall rows of corn. After that, they take a relaxing hayride around the farm. Along the way, they see apple trees, scarecrows, and fields filled with pumpkins.

Before leaving, everyone enjoys warm apple cider and freshly baked apple pie. The children also buy a small bag of caramel apples to take home. As the sun begins to set, the family takes one last photo together surrounded by bright red, orange, and yellow leaves.

The Johnson family looks forward to this special trip every year because it reminds them to slow down, spend time together, and enjoy everything that makes fall such a wonderful season.
